In the face of death, what remains? For environmental activist John Seed, the answer was love.

Til Death Do Us Part Earth Warrior is the inspiring story of John Seed and his wife, Kirrily, who spent their lives fighting to protect the environment. John was a co-founder of the Rainforest Action Network and Greenpeace, and Kirrily was a passionate advocate for Indigenous rights.

When John was diagnosed with terminal cancer, he and Kirrily decided to make the most of their remaining time together. They traveled the world, speaking out about the importance of environmental protection. They also spent time with their family and friends, and enjoyed the simple pleasures of life.

John Seed died in 2014, but his legacy continues through Kirrily and the many people who were inspired by his work. Til Death Do Us Part Earth Warrior is a powerful and moving story about love, loss, and the power of the human spirit.
